THE RIGHT PRICE

VESTERDAY we discussed one A sepect of the problem of corruption, namely where originates from outside the public service and is directed towards the securing of some favour or privilege from a Government officer. Today we discuss another aspect, the corrupt official who withholds some service which Government provides or who compile cates some procedure unless the right price is paid. In this case corruption is directly injurious. It succeeds in many cases simply by the exploits. tion of Ignorance.

The procedure to obtain licences, permits and authorisations of one kind or another is a complete mystery to most people. in other cases, licences and permits are lesued for fees which are not prominently displayed. In yet other cases issue depends upon an individual's ability to Justify his claim for a particular permi or Ilconco. The unsuspecting, the illiterate, and the simpleton are ready targets for the Venal official. Many cases come up in court which show that people expect to pay something where complications are involved and when an improper demand is made, no questions are asked.

DOOR and uneducated people in this Colony seem to be not merely submissive in the face of these demands. Often they seem to believe that this ls the way Government-and private enterprise organisations-work. But it is not enough to ask people to acquaint themselves with procedures and fees stipulated by Government It is up to Government to take two important steps. The first is simple: where any permit, Ilcence or certificate is issued an enquiry desk must be prominent! situated which will inform people about the exact reguirements. Failing this, prominently displayed and simply speaker system can be employed.

The second step is more drastic and this is where we believe the Attorney-General's new committee can be really helpful. The procedure of every Government department it comes into contact with the public, must be thoroughly overhauled and necessary entirely replaced. The Police Traffic Department to their credit have bent over backwards to defeat corruption in the award of driving licences, it may not be fool proof and it may have given rise to some new grievances but it was the right thing to

THAT is only one small section of one Government department-all have to conduct this 364, Labour 257, Liberal agonising reappraisal. Timeoverboard if necessary, Whole think the result affirms procedures must be revolu- faith of the people in take the greatest pains to servative and unionist governeliminate possible abuses. And ment in providing a better life and members of the public work which is being done by must be set up. The Chairman should be someone of the callbre of Mr J. W. Platt, Chairman of the recent Salaries Cammission, who will not be afraid to act drastically and ruthlessly to introduce a new. simplified system that is also as foolproof as possible.

It is immaterial whether corruption was worse twenty years ago than it is now. As the population grows, as the Body Corpulant turns to obesity and as the demands of the people for Government services increase, the opportunities for corruption expand proportionately. We doubt whether the appeals that Government is now making for public coeperation are going to produce apactacular results. And the ides of a dramatic purce is just fanciful thinking. Only by a vigorous overhaul of those channels-whether in public utilities or Government in which corruption can thrive Wen time and perseverence.

strange masterpieces. His "Awning Over The Moon" is an attempt to depict in terms of everyday life the despair of a lighthouse-keeper who is convinced that he should have been a jockey. While he and his assistant are discussing the matter the untended light fails and a fog comes down. A ship in distress bangs into the lighthouse, and the only survivors are a beautiful Bulgarian gipsy and a horse. With a cry of joy the frustrated keeper mounts the horse and falls off. In his despair he kills the gipsy, the assistant keeper, a laundress who lives there as his aunt, and the horse. He then shoots himself with the laundress's ravolver. There is a moment's silence. Then a toghorn is heard. Curtain.

THE END OF THE PEN CLUB TRIAL FOCUSES ATTENTION ON CRIME IN THE UNDERWORLD

Only this time someone was killed...

MAN shot dead in East End club. . Woman witness disappears before she can testify in murder case . . Witnesses get police guard . . . Woman staggers into Old Bailey and says she has been slashed . Judge orders re-trial.

And now, at the end of it all, a man is jailed five years for assault. This was the Pen Club case. Sensational stuff while it lasted. A 93-day wonder. Will it be forgotten tomorrow?

Police, lawyers and a multitude of little frightened people (grocers, case proprietors, clubowners and petty crooks) know that the Chicago-like incidents the Pen trial brought to light are only part of a great underworld activity that simmers beneath the urbane surface of London.

Protection

They could tell-but don't-- about gangs that operate protection rackets, about wrecked shops, smashed tills, ruined stock. They know that almost every night somewhere in London someone is slashed. beeten up, or stabbed, and that there is no publicity because victims don't talk.

Now its leaders have ambitions to move into West London - the Soho and Bayswater territory of another gang. If they do, and if the empuny story is not just crook's boasting to intimidate rival crooks, there could be fireworks in the West End that would cause the deaths of thmocent people.
